SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY IN THE NEWS 3

qualification, found in page 527. Death qualification text is found in chapter 12, page 510. According to Levitt et al., (2013), the complainant claimed that correction facilities make false prescriptions to pharmacies to conceivably break the law. The complainant filed that the lengths death sentences states are equal to the medicines for lethal injections. Levitt et al., (2013) goes on to say, that death penalty in States scramble for lethal injection drugs. This implies that the State is struggling to find this drug (pentobarbital). Richard Dieter, the chairperson of the Washington-based Death Penalty, claims that the government wants to use pentobarbital for the unfortunate part of them is that they do not have it; as it is a scarce chemical. The States have been left with no choice but to try other prescriptions or go to well-known pharmacies that sell drugs banned by other larger companies.

From a news article, the statement given by Deborah Derringer of the New York State Bar Association is that the death penalty is not a fair means to trial (p. 512). This is because DNA tests revealed that those on death row were not the actual perpetrators.

To sum it up, the novel use of drugs in lethal injections for convicted individuals is inhumane because the new drugs used, such as midazolam and hydromorphone, are not tested on using it on convicted individuals as they are experimenting it. The issue of using lethal injection is controversial as convicted individuals are not innocent. Although the guilty people committed bad crimes, they do not deserve to die under unethical terms.
